

Earliest Levant Company Members

David Wilson : September 2017

The first table on the following pages shows the names of merchants named in the charters of the Turkey Company of 1581 (Ch81) and the Venice Company of 1583 (Ch83), together with those of the combined Levant Company of 1592, 1600 and 1605 (Ch92, Ch00, Ch05).

In addition, I have shown the names of members of the Levant Company which are given in a remarkable document preserved at Hatfield House (Cecil). This not only lists those who were full members or freemen of the Company in June 1600 but also “such of their sons and servants [factors, apprentices etc.] who were then present or had died and been buried in the dominions of Turkey and Venice for the space of 12 years that the said trade of the Levant began by Englishmen.” The names of several of these ‘sons and servants’ recur elsewhere in the history of the Company. There is one woman listed among the members of the Company, Margaret Ashley, who was the widow of Ralph Ashley, who had been named in the 1592 charter.

I have listed the names of the ‘sons and servants’ in a second table; those who were said to be dead by June 1600 are marked with an x. Although some of them are specifically described as sons, there are others with the same name as the master who may be sons or other relations, so I have not distinguished them in the table.

It is well known that many of these pioneers of the Levant trade were also involved with other trading companies. To illustrate this, the first table also shows which of them were named in the charters of the East India Company (EIC) and the Spanish Company (SpC). Four of them, Richard Staper, Edward Holmden, William Bond and Oliver Style, were also named in the charter of the Barbary Company. Other names in these charters are not shown here.

The spelling of names in sixteenth- and seventeenth-century documents was very variable and there are additional problems posed by transcription errors, so the spellings I have used may not be the same as those found elsewhere. In particular, the spellings shown in the version of the Venice Company charter in British History Online (BHO) are wildly distorted, e.g. ‘Darobins’ for ‘Dawkins’, ‘Ronning’ for ‘Ban(n)ing’, and ‘Torote’ for ‘Trowte’. In the BHO version of the Cecil list, the names of two ‘servants’ appear as ‘Puncke’ and ‘Boe’ instead of ‘Funcke’ and ‘Roe’ in the printed book version. Some of the names of ‘sons and servants’ look very unlikely: I have changed “Cwochman” to “Churchman”, “Hugett” to “Haggett”, and “Notlingham” to “Nottingham”, but have left others such as “Randwe” and “Rowed” as they were printed. I have indicated some of the alternative spellings which I have found - but there remains the possibility that, in some cases, I have confused two people of the same name.

I must emphasise that my information about the documents mentioned above has been taken from the secondary printed sources shown below under REFERENCES, not from the original documents
