Notes:

1- There has been sustained desecration of cemetery prior to when fencing was put up about a decade ago, with few crosses etc. remaining now undamaged. Some repairs and rearrangements have been done recently, but clearly much still needs to be done. The hire of a resident caretaker over the past decade has greatly improved the situation.

2-* donates WWII dead and the details (I) are taken from the War graves commission Internet site. The 3 Levantine war dead (WWI only) are buried in the Bornova church yard with a memorial: Marble plinth with inscription surmounted with tall ornate cross,

Noel Edmund Giraud
 Serjeant 173em regiment de ligne
 Killed at Verdun 29 June 1916
 Herbert Wilfried Giraud
 Corporal 52em Infanterie Coloniale
 Killed on the Somme 19 October 1916
 Richard Norman Keyser
 Lieutenant 3rd East Lancashire Regt.
 Attached Royal Flying Corps
 Accidentally killed at Hounslow 22 August
 1917
 Who volunteered on the Outbreak of the Great
 War 1914 – 1918 who gave their lives for their country
 And for the right justice

The 3 non- Levantine military burials are recorded in the Commonwealth War Graves commission web site with the following details:

| Surname | Name           | Rank                                | Unit                         | Date of death | Age at death | Relations   |

Historical information provided on the same site:

During the Second World War, Turkey retained her neutrality and those Commonwealth servicemen buried there were mainly men taken prisoner during operations in the Aegean, who died while attempting to escape from camps where they awaited transport to Germany and Italy, and whose bodies were washed up on the Turkish coast.

I have not been able to ascertain the operations and individual circumstances of death.

3- There is an old map made for this cemetery drawn months (May) before the retaking of the city in September 1922 as there was concern for the future. As it turns out the cemetery together with the Bornova church suffered significant damage not helped by the fact that they were situated on the invasion path for the city. This map recently rediscovered in the Public Records office in London by the former chaplain in 1999 was updated in 1934. Thus Sally Gallia's survey acts as the final updating.

4- The grid numbers as well as all the base information for the list was based on the work conducted by Sally Gallia and is used here to cross check with the cemetery listing for Buca.

5- The criteria for being buried here is to belong to one of the old Bornova Anglican/Protestant families. Other Protestants tend to be buried in Pasakopru.

6- Unlike virtually all other cemeteries of any denomination, this burial ground is still under private ownership allowing the management to be affected by its own cemetery council with the council only being in charge of tree pruning.

7- With no facilities existing in Turkey for cremation, this along with other working cemeteries in this country provide a continuing record of deaths as opposed to the now general practice in the west with no head stones to record past lives.

8- According to Ft Ron Rogers' later correction, the last burial at Bornova on this list is given as 1990, whereas he buried Daphne Aliberti's mother there in 1999(?).

DATE ANALYSIS OF BURIALS AT THE CEMETERY

| Date range (20) | Total |
|-----------------|-------|
| 1836-1856       | 5     |
| 1857-1876       | 14    |
| 1877-1896       | 39    |
| 1897-1916       | 49    |
| 1917-1936       | 50    |
| 1937-1956       | 56    |
| 1957-1976       | 39    |
| 1977-1996       | 23    |
| Undated         | 17    |
| Unreadable      | 21    |
| All             | 312   |

Considering the cemetery was officially opened in 1875 (from 'Clerics and their contribution – Donald H. Simpson, Candlesticks VII, no8), we can surmise that the first 16 were transferred from their former site, the corner of the now non-existent Catholic cemetery of Bornova. This site by the Catholic church in the central square of Bornova now has a primary school and a supermarket. The recent tailing in number of burials is likely to continue in the future as the community continues to dwindle.
